We went to school at 8 o'clock. The Irish arrived and they made their presentation about their country. All the other students also showed their presentations to them.

Two men gave a talk about business; how to start a mini company and other things needed to be successful in business. They also taught us a new platform, Tweedback, which is their company. This platform is used in classes or meetings to make online questions without disturbing the classmates. Everybody is connected, with an account, and the teacher decides which questions can be posted and seen for everybody with a special device.

Afterward we divided into international groups and we built our own company following the procedure that the men had given to us. We had a break, for lunch, and then everybody presented their projects in front of the others.

At around 4 o'clock in the afternoon, we went to BILSE's building so that we could cook each country their typical food. The Italians made pasta alla carbonara and tartufi, the Maltese cooked potatoes, maltese sausages and pork ribs in the oven, the Irish cooked soup of stew and the Catalans made Spanish omelet, catalan malidros and bread with anchovies.

Shortly after we sang songs, each country in their own language and we stayed there talking until 8 o'clock. Then everybody went with their families.
